

ROG's New Train Operation 'Goes Live'

01 March 2015

Rail Operations Group (ROG), the UK's most revolutionary, innovative and unique train operating company, 'goes live'.

Following an extremely comprehensive and rigorous licence application approvals process, ROG can now concentrate on its mission to become the operator of choice for all 'rail services' movements. Gordon Cox, ROG's Commercial and Finance Director said "it's not only an exciting time for us but receipt of our licence provides a unique opportunity for our customers to engage with an operator who is dedicated to their specific business needs".

Providing a supporting role to the UK rail industry, in particular, the rolling stock engineering and train operating communities, ROG specialises in train movements relating to delivery, testing, maintenance, modification and refurbishment programmes. ROG also provides support for challenging or demanding projects by offering a range of cost-effective, train operating related services to its clients.

ROG Achieves ORR Recognition

ROG has become the first and only independent company in the UK approved by the Office of Rail Regulation as a train driver training and examination centre under the provisions of the European Train Driver Licences and Certificates Regulations.

ROG offer delivery of the 'EuroDriver' train driver training programme or can support other train operating companies in delivering their own company training programme.

New Control Office

In addition to expanding operations in their City (Farringdon) based headquarters, ROG is also establishing an operations control office in Network Rail's Integrated Control Centre (ICC) in Derby. Dave Burley, ROG's Operations and Compliance Director said "as well as Derby being an obvious choice due its geographic position, having a presence in an integrated control centre enables us to provide a more informed service to our customers".

ROG's Team Grows

ROG's team continues to grow. This month sees Steff Ferry joining ROG from GBRf as SQE Systems Manager, Richard Broughton joining from EMT as Operations Delivery Manager and our team of Operations Managers and Training Managers increases to meet demand. The team is further strengthened by the appointment of two very experienced and respected associates.

Train Driver Psychometric Testing

57% of all candidates who undertake their train driver psychometric testing with ROG successfully complete the assessment process. This compares with pass rates as low as 10% in other parts of the UK. The reason for the high pass rate is because ROG are the only organisation who includes a half day briefing and practice testing session before candidates take the test for real.
